9AM-1:30PM—sorted through one drawer of my light gray filing cabinet; preliminary sorting only. What an enormous job it is, and a job that I will successfully complete this fall and winter. Somehow I must have said that before. Nevertheless... I came across the "European Nixon" poster that is shown on the preceding page and was sorting through papers and could not, of course, resist pasting it down here. I seem to have an enormous appetite for collecting such stuff.

Slept warmly and well—no problems with the very chilly temperature & water. In the course of the fall and winter I will, of course, establish particular routines that will represent a dialectical working out of my personal needs and desires, on the one hand, and the temperature and weather conditions, on the other. How curious—I shall adapt to my Eskdale world in much the same manner that animals in the wild adapt to the world. The big question, of course, is—will it be necessary for me to migrate to Box 40. On vera. Now, however, I must prepare myself for the meeting of the Historical Society this evening at 7:30 P.M.—also at 6:30 I shall have to meet that fellow at the Northeastern Bank.
